Amendment Defeated By 1,000 Votes

State education officials expressed disappointment last weekend at the apparent defeat of a constitutional amendment in the recent General Election, intended to ease the school construction burden of Virginia counties.
The amendment, voted on Nov. 2 would have permitted counties to borrow from the State Retirement Fund without approval of the voters in a referendum.
Incomplete Associated Press returns of a week ago showed that the proposal was ahead in the tally by a scant 439 votes, with 153 precincts remaining to be reported.
Figures from these additional precincts showed that the vote opposed to the amendment had gone ahead by about 1,000 votes.
However, confirmation of the defeat of the amendment will have to await the official canvass of the State Elections Board which meets on Monday, Nov. 29.
In many quarters, it was felt that the vote on the amendment was influenced by uncertainty over future school programs brought on by the Supreme Court decision on segregation.
In the past counties have borrowed construction funds from the lLiterary Fund, but this fund has a long waiting list and has been inadequate to meet requests for loans.

Blue Hornets Lose Title Game

Emporia High School literally filled the air with forward passes to score a 34 to 0 victory over the Appomattox High School football team here Saturday night. The game was a post-season tilt for the regional championship, each team having won the title in its own league. The Emporia school thus finished out a difficult schedule in the undefeated class.
The game was played under adverse weather conditions. A soggy field and frequent showers, prevented Appomattox from mustering an offense, and forward passing, which was the season's strong arm of the Blue Hornets, turned out to be their outdoing in the regional play-off. Wesley Newsome, the fine Emporia quarterback, was the star of the game, completing 14 of 23 pass attempts, being unmindful of the water-logged ball and mud-covered playing field.
Newsome tossed touchdown passes to halfback Billy Towell twice on plays covering 40 and 25 yards. Next he connected with Jim Everett, left end, to the Hornets one to set up another tally. In the third quarter, Newsome passed for another touchdown run by Everett from the 20. Finally, he threw to Dick Bloom from 15 yards out.
The game ended the football season at Appomattox High School. It was a successful season, despite the final game loss. The Blue Hornets had a season record of six wins and four losses, and won the district four, group two championship.
Coach Gordon Bragg will now devote his attention to basketball and eagerly awaits the opportunity to put the almost-completed gymnasium into use.

Highway Department Starting Secondary Road Marking Work

A program to provide better marking on many roads in Virginia's secondary system has been started by the State Highway Department and should be completed during the summer of 1956.
Highway engineers described it as "a most important step" in providing a better sign system on the secondary roads.
Expansion of the program on a state-wide basis was authorized by the department after the results of a "pilot study" of improved signing on secondary roads in Southampton County were analyzed.
The main objectives of the program are to develop a uniform sign system and to put directional markings, where necessary, on selected secondary roads to facilitate travel.
To be selected for signing, a route must be a principal hard-surfaced road, serve a city or incorporated town, an unincorporated town or village recognized for its importance to the county or a point of state or national historical interest.
The new signs will be installed in accordance with a schedule which will coordinate the program in all counties and which is expected to be completed not later than June 30, 1956.
"As a result of increased travel on the secondary system, the department believed better directional signing was necessary," S. D Crute, secondary roads engineer stated. Due to a variety of conditions, he explained, directional marking in the past has not always been properly integrated or uniform. "Under the new standards, we hope to correct those inconsistencies," he added.
In addition to the directional sign program, the department will continue its policy of using secondary route numbers at intersections.

Philippine Teacher Visits Appomattox

Senor Miguel Ocampo, of Masbate National Agricultural School, the Philippine Islands, spent two days in Appomattox this week as guest of the Vocational Agriculture Department of Appomattox High School.
Senor Ocampo is in the United States under the exchange program of the Foreign Operations Administration. He was been in Washington, D. C., prior to coming to Appomattox, and from here will visit several American farm belts before returning to his school.
He is supervisor of a school of about 500 students. They are farm boys and girls, of high school level, seeking to learn modern methods of agriculture and home economics. The Masbate school is a boarding school, with dormitory quarters, similar to those of the Appomattox Agricultural High School in its early days. He was a visitor in the Times-Virginian office while here, and explained the agricultural problems of his native land. He had an interesting war experience with the resistance movement during the Japanese Occupation. He spoke most favorably of the value of American aid since World War II. He said growing of rice and development of livestock production, as well as a balanced farm program was the problem of the new era in the Philippines.

Tuberculosis is one of the principal health problems, yet I believe sincerely that we now have within our grasp the means for removing this hazard from our midst. While we take pride in the tremendous strides we have made against the disease, we should realize this gives us no room for complacency. Hundreds of Virginians still die each year . . . TB frequently means broken homes, poverty and heartache."

SHANHOLTZ LISTS TIPS FOR SAFETY WHILE HUNTING

Last year in Virginia eight hunters lost their lives in hunting accidents. These tragic accidents point to the necessity of practicing safe hunting habits, according to Dr. Mack I. Shanholtz, State Health Commissioner.
Many of these accidents resulted from the careless handling of guns, the Commissioner said. "While you are resting, before you start walking or before you put the gun in the car, always break and unload it. Before crossing over or going through a fence, unload your gun and place it on the other side of the fence. Never hand a companion a loaded gun," he cautioned.
Dr. Shanholtz noted that in addition to safe handling of guns precautions should be taken to protect the health of the hunter while on hunting trips. "Men who are not accustomed to tramping in the woods should be careful not to overexert themselves. Stop and rest for a few minutes every hour or so. If you wear heavy boots or shoes, loosen them when you eat or rest because heavy leather and tight lacing restrict the circulation," he added.
"Strong, warm, and light clothing is best to wear for hunting. Be sure to wear a bright colored cap or shirt, preferably red, so that other hunters can see easily in the woods.
"Hunting is a great sport and a healthy recreation when it is practiced safely. Be careful in handling your gun. Know where your partner is before you shoot; don't get overtired. You'll come back home from a wonderful sport—alive and refreshed," Dr. Shanholtz concluded.

The cry of the tobacco auctioneer will ring out in warehouses Monday, Nov. 29, as the 1954 marketing season begins in the Virginia darkleaf belt.
Warehouses will open in Farmville, Blackstone, Bedford and in Lynchburg. Monday after Thanksgiving is the traditional day for sale openings in the belt.
Markets will close December 16 for the Christmas holidays, and reopen in January to complete the selling season.
Experienced tobacco men predict a good season. Surveys of Type 21 leaf throughout the area indicate that the 1954 crop may total as much as 12,000,000 pounds. In addition, there will be offerings of sun cured leaf.
The price support level is just a bit below last year's, at 34.8 cents per pound. Last year it was 45.
The experts predict some quality offerings, and foresee careful attention to sorting by length and color and neat tying, to enhance the receipts to the grower.
Joel Watkins Jr., of Planters Warehouse, Farmville, was in Appomattox last week-end, and stated that he had seen some excellent darkleaf tobacco in sections of this county and predicted a fine marketing season. The quality of this year's crop may turn out to be better than normal. There are some reports of adverse effects of the long summer drouth and late planting. Spotty tobacco is not general over the belt.
There has been a period of suitable weather for taking down tobacco. Damp weather has enabled a large number of growers to be ready for the warehouse opening.
If lower grades of tobacco sell as well as last year, the average for the crop will likely be higher because there is more poundage of higher grade darkleaf.
The opening of the dark tobacco markets is an eagerly awaited event of the year in Central Virginia. Appomattox, traditionally, is the best dark tobacco producer in the Old Dominion, and the leaf contributes a sizeable portion of the income of local farmers.
